Cyberhawk has announced its second generation of its ICS attack platform, the Cyberhawk™ IP Agent, has been certified for operation on Linux. The new Cyberhawk™ IP Agent version is fully OS-independent and is fully certified for operation on GNU/Linux servers. The Cyberhawk™ IP Agent is released under the GNU General Public License. The Cyberhawk™ IP Agent is a highly configurable, lightweight ICS probe, providing a range of relevant performance and connectivity statistics as well as blocking functionality. It can be used to detect intrusion, malware, unwanted connections and also highlight traffic with particular characteristics. "The current Cyberhawk agent runs on Microsoft Windows servers and now we are extending that capability to non-Windows-based platforms such as Linux," said Tim Young, CEO, Cyberhawk. "We are pleased to be able to do this as it is a much-needed extension for our user base." Cyberhawk's first-generation IP Agent saw widespread uptake since its introduction three years ago, and has been deployed at over 500 organisations worldwide. "Cyberhawk's first-generation ICS probe was a huge success, and that momentum has continued with the new second generation of the IP Agent," said Steve Mellor, chief analyst at IFS. "Companies are investigating ICS because it provides additional insights into user behaviour and the network infrastructure. Cyberhawk's IP Agent has been incredibly successful because it's so easy to install and use.

This latest release will enable companies to find the right path into the market." The Cyberhawk™ IP Agent includes a range of excellent features, such as a TCP/UDP view mode, an on-demand agent detector, and an alerting feature.
